Rotating Internship
Emergency and Critical Care, Internal Medicine, and Surgery

July 2008 to June 2009
Three Positions Available
$35,000 Annual Salary + Benefits Package

The Pet Emergency & Specialty Center of Marin (PESCM) will be accepting three candidates for a one-year internship program with an emphasis on emergency and critical care medicine, but also including rotations with internal medicine and surgical specialists. This one-year program will provide candidates with an excellent foundation in small animal veterinary practice.

Primary case management by interns is augmented by close “on-shift” interaction with our staff of experienced emergency clinicians, many of whom have completed advanced training in emergency and critical care medicine via internships, residencies, and fellowships. Our goal is to pair each intern with a more experienced doctor to provide frequent learning opportunities. Independent and critical thinking will be mentored in a supportive environment. Interns will typically be scheduled an average of 4 shifts per week on day, overnight, or swing schedules. We try to ensure that our interns have some free time to enjoy the beauty of the northern San Francisco Bay Area.

Interns will round with staff specialists including those boarded through the ACVECC, ACVIM, ACVR, and ACVS. Participation is required in regularly scheduled morbidity and mortality rounds as well as a journal club. Along with other doctors on our team, interns will occasionally provide case or topic presentations in a Grand Rounds format. These meetings provide a dynamic opportunity in which to hone excellent communication skills with professional colleagues and to encourage the practice of current, evidence-based medicine. A clinical presentation and paper (unusual clinical case presentation, challenging “what’s your diagnosis” case, approved interpretive summary, or review article) towards the end of the internship training program is also required.

Our intern positions will be open until they are filled. Applications should include: 1) curriculum vitae; 2) cover letter indicating your reasons for applying and area(s) of special interest; 3) information regarding California licensure status; 4) three letters of recommendation.
